

FOREIGN DIRECT INVESTMENTS DURING ECONOMIC CRISIS

Associate Professor PhD. CRISTINA ANDREICA¹, PhD. Student DRAGOS MICU²

Abstract

The current economic climate has had strong impacts coming from the economic crisis. Manifested imbalances were diverse and included most areas. Multiple connections and ties between the economies of the world have made this experience a phenomenon spreading very fast and durable, now very few countries entering into a process of economic recovery. In this context, FDI went into decline, that is highly unfavorable especially for developing countries.
